

Interactive comment on “Open Access: Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities, and Threats. An Editorial” by Geoffrey Bodenhausen

Geoffrey Bodenhausen

geoffrey.bodenhausen@ens.fr

Received and published: 7 December 2020

Gottfried Ottings is quite right to defend the noble art of butterfly collecting. Rutherford never said anything critical about these pretty insects either. The proper quote is: “All science is either physics or stamp collecting” (1925.) I strongly recommend <http://rutherford.org.nz/msquotes.htm>. If the readers find my editorial rude, let them be reassured that Rutherford was not always polite either when speaking about his colleagues: “He is like the Euclidian Point: he has position without magnitude” (c1912.)

---

Interactive comment on Magn. Reson. Discuss., <https://doi.org/10.5194/mr-2020-28>, 2020.